How Do I Get One?

Complete the FAFSA!
www.FAFSA.gov

Colleges determine your eligibility for financial aid using the information you and your parents provide on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Most colleges send out financial aid award letters around the same time as college acceptance letters.

EACH COLLEGE PROVIDES ITS OWN AWARD LETTER.

What Do I Do With It?

Read through the Cost of Attendance and the financial aid offered with your family.

Determine how much you can afford to pay out-of-pocket.

Accept the free money (like grants and scholarships) first.

The EFC is not an amount due. It's a number that helps colleges identify your financial need. It is an estimate of what you COULD afford.

Remember, student loans must be paid back with interest. If you're offered student loans, only accept the amount you need to pay college expenses.

Subsidized loans don't accrue interest until you're out of college.

Does It Change?

Yes! You'll receive a new award letter every year you attend college.

Remember, this means you'll also need to complete a renewal FAFSA for each year of college.

Financial situations change, so be sure to talk with your Financial Aid Office directly if you have questions.
